Modern-day Hong Kong may be best known for its glossy skyscrapers and world-class attractions, but to understand how the city became the bustling metropolis that it is today, one only need to pay a visit to Old Town Central.

One of the oldest yet also most dynamic districts in the city, Old Town Central – encompassing the sloped streets and small alleys of Central and Sheung Wan – encapsulates Hong Kong’s rich and diverse spirit. A place where century-old temples share the same streets as fashion-forward concept stores, or where authentic tea houses coexist with modern art galleries, this colourful neighbourhood is at once old and new while also being proudly local and unmistakably global.

Immensely walkable and brimming with attractions, this neighbourhood is perfect to experience on foot. There’s plenty to discover here, from heritage buildings and art institutions to local eats and fun souvenirs. Whatever your interests are, this guide will lead you to some of the best things that Old Town Central has to offer. Have fun exploring.

Time Travellers

Exploring Old Town Central is like taking a trip back in time. The neighbourhood, which encompasses Central and Sheung Wan, was where some of the earliest chapters of modern Hong Kong history unfolded. Today, more than 180 years since the British first settled at Possession Point, this district is still home to cobblestone streets, heritage buildings, traditional temples and other fascinating landmarks that illustrate its storied past and its early role in shaping the cosmopolitan city of Hong Kong as we know it today.

THE BEGINNINGS OF MODERN-DAY HONG KONG

These historic sites played an important role in the early chapters of the city's transition from a humble settlement to a modern metropolis.

1 Possession Street

Ordinary as it may seem, Possession Street has a significant place in the history of Hong Kong. On 25 January 1841, the British navy arrived at nearby Possession Point (now Hollywood Road Park) and began 150 years of colonial rule, marked by a flag-raising ceremony the day after the initial landing. Originally perched on the waterfront, Possession Street was given a new lease of life through reclamation. The area is now dotted with hip restaurants and boutiques, alongside historic stores where you can still sample a taste of an older Hong Kong.

2 Pottinger Street

Pottinger Street and its surrounding area give a good sense of what the lives of Central's early dwellers would have been like. The stone slabs spanning the entire street were laid in an irregular manner for a reason: some sections of this street between Hollywood Road and Connaught Road Central were particularly steep, and the uneven pavement made it easier for commuters and merchant-bearers to walk on while also allowing rainwater to flow down. Because of the unique design, locals still refer to it today as 'Stone Slab Street'.

There were stalls on either side of the street when it was constructed in the 19th century. Originally, they sold household goods, or offered services such as shoe and pot repairing, as well as clothing alteration. Today, as consumer habits have changed, most of them sell festive costumes or handicrafts.

LANDMARKS INFLUENCED BY EAST AND WEST CULTURE

Hong Kong's unique cross-cultural heritage is duly reflected in the architecture and conceptual design of these iconic monuments.

3 Hong Kong Museum of Medical Sciences

This Edwardian brick building is a symbol of the development of medical sciences in Hong Kong. After the bubonic plague hit the city in the late 19th century, the government stepped up efforts in medical development, which eventually led to the establishment of the first bacteriology institute. The laboratory came into service in 1906 as the city's first purpose-built clinical laboratory for public health, and the cornerstone of the development of medical sciences in Hong Kong. The museum now contains important exhibits on the city's medical history and is the first institution of its kind to compare Chinese and Western pathologies.

4 Chinese YMCA of Hong Kong, Bridges Street Centre

Hong Kong's architecture was greatly enriched when Western and Chinese influences came together during the previous era. The Bridges Street Centre of the Chinese YMCA of Hong Kong, which is just steps away from the Hong Kong Museum of Medical Sciences, is a perfect case in point. Completed in 1918, the centre is a six-storey blend of Chicago School architecture and Chinese roofing techniques. In the early 20th century, it was a major social centre for the Chinese youth community and boasted enviable facilities, such as a fitness centre, restaurants and a hostel, as well as Hong Kong's very first indoor swimming pool.

5 Dr Sun Yat-sen Museum

Despite its Edwardian-style facade – complete with Greek columns and stained glass windows – this four-storey museum is dedicated to the life and achievements of Dr Sun Yat-sen, who was an instrumental figure in the establishment of the Republic of China. The museum includes two permanent exhibitions that showcase artefacts from Dr Sun's eventful life and career, and also highlights the statesman's close ties to Hong Kong, where he received his secondary and university education and began to nurture some of his progressive ideas.

PLACES OF WORSHIP

From Chinese temples to Catholic cathedrals, the cultural melting pot of Hong Kong is home to places of worship for faiths and religions from all over the world.

6 Tai Ping Shan Street

Walk up from Possession Street and you will find yourself at Tai Ping Shan Street. A number of distinctive ancient temples line the two sides of this 300-metre-long path. The most eye-catching of them all is probably the smoky, red temple called Kwong Fook I Tsz. Built in 1856, it is a classic example of a temple that fulfilled diverse roles. It was an ancestral temple for migrant families, a shelter for the ill and also housed memorial tablets for immigrant workers who passed away while in Hong Kong. Also be sure to visit Kwun Yum Temple, which is still frequented by worshippers.

7 Man Mo Temple

A five-minute walk from Tai Ping Shan Street, Man Mo Temple is a stunning complex estimated to have been built more than 150 years ago. It comprises three blocks, each serving different purposes. The namesake structure, Man Mo Temple, pays tribute to the God of Literature and the God of War, while Lit Shing Kung was created for all heavenly gods. Finally, Kung Sor was an assembly hall for resolving community disputes.

A great place to visit for history lovers, the well-preserved historic building houses a bronze bell dating back to 1847 and a sedan chair from 1862. The structure itself is just as fascinating, and comprises granite pillars, granite door frames, engraved wood plaques and ancient mural paintings.

8 Jamia Mosque

You can easily recognise Hong Kong's oldest mosque by its mint-green facade and gorgeous Islamic-influenced architecture. With its Arabic-style windows and gates, the Grade I historic building stands out among its Mid-Levels surroundings. Aside from being a place of worship for Muslims in Hong Kong, Jamia Mosque is also an important historic landmark that dates all the way back to the 1840s.

9 Catholic Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception

The Catholic Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception was moved to this quiet Mid-Levels location after its previous incarnation was destroyed in a fire. Built in the late 1880s, the church is a stunning example of gothic architecture and was constructed in a cruciform shape with a central spire. The structure has been designated a Grade I historical building and was also given an Honorable Mention by the UNESCO Asia Pacific Heritage Conservation Award in 2003 following its extensive renovation. Equally stunning inside, the cathedral is open for mass every Sunday and for public visitations from Monday to Saturday.

INNOVATIVE TRIBUTES TO HONG KONG HISTORY

Using modern technology and cutting-edge design, these sites celebrate the heritage of the city in exciting new ways.

10 Tai Kwun

Tai Kwun, meaning 'big station' in Cantonese, was a nickname for the former Central Police Station Compound, which boasts a history of more than 170 years. The site comprises 16 heritage buildings – all magnificent works of architecture. The former Police Headquarters, for example, is a resplendent example of Neoclassicism while the barracks, built between 1862 and 1864, is known for its distinctive Roman-style arch.

Wonderfully preserved, the historical site has since been transformed into an arts and culture hub – and one of the largest conservation projects to date in Hong Kong. Along with two newly built structures, the original buildings now house art galleries, retail shops and various bars and restaurants. Tai Kwun also hosts curated art exhibitions, performances, workshops, film screenings and guided tours, so be sure to check ahead for schedules and details.

11 Pak Tsz Lane Park

From Tai Kwun, walk down Hollywood Road and you'll soon reach Pak Tsz Lane Park, one of the 16 stops along the Dr Sun Yat-sen Historic Trail. This tranquil patch of green was built to commemorate the achievements of the Furen Literary Society, which was founded by revolutionary leaders Yeung Ku-wan and Tse Tsan-tai on 13 March 1892. The group eventually merged with Dr Sun's Revive China Society and was heavily involved in the 1911 Chinese Revolution. Revitalised with an urban architectural design, this memorial park features exhibition panels, interactive facilities and an educational playground that traces the society's history and revolutionary activities.

📍 Pak Tsz Lane, Central

12 Hong Kong News-Expo

The former Bridges Street Market has undergone a massive transformation to become the Hong Kong News-Expo, Asia's first exhibition and education facility to showcase and celebrate the role of media and journalism in Hong Kong. The Grade III historic building houses interactive exhibitions demonstrating the development of local media, spanning from its infancy in the form of newspaper and radio to television and digital media. Join the free seminars, workshops and guided tours for a deeper understanding and appreciation of the Hong Kong press.

13 Central Market

One of the revitalisation projects under Urban Renewal Authority and managed by Chinachem Group, the revitalised Central Market is one of the latest developments in Central. Covering over a 12,000-square-metre area, the Grade III historic building, located between Queen's Road Central and Des Voeux Road, has been converted into a 'Playground for All', offering experiences and venues for dining and retail aimed at connecting the local community to the neighbourhood's history, tradition, and contemporary culture.

Crazy for Art

One of the most vibrant neighbourhoods in Hong Kong, Old Town Central is bursting with creativity on every street corner. This area has everything from experimental stage performances held inside a repurposed depot, to world-class art exhibitions and edgy graffiti that graces the walls of small alleys.

ART AND CULTURE HUBS

From a gallery complex to a private museum, these centres of creativity all call Central home.

14 PMQ

Formerly the Police Married Quarters, PMQ now houses works by promising young artists and designers in Hong Kong. Not only will you find a fascinating line-up of creative studios and designer products here, but there are also frequent exhibitions and workshops, giving you insights into the local creative scene. That's not all: several heritage sites still remain at PMQ, such as the Former Central Junior Police Call Clubhouse and the granite stairs and rubble retaining wall of the Central School.

15 Fringe Club

Situated amid the hustle and bustle of Central, Fringe Club distinguishes itself from the surrounding high-rises with a neoclassical exterior made of milky white and brown bricks.

Since it inhabited part of the Old Dairy Farm Depot in 1984, the Fringe Club has been a celebrated exhibition and performance venue, and has helped introduce experimental works to the city's art scene. Catch a host of poetry reading sessions, exhibitions and plays and musical performances while you're here, but be sure to check the events calendar before you visit.

16 Pedder Building

Housed within this beautiful Beaux-Arts style structure and a Grade I historic building is a wonderful range of internationally renowned galleries including the likes of Gagosian and Pearl Lam Galleries. Spanning multiple floors, Pedder Building is the ideal destination for gallery-hopping and discovering works by some of the biggest names and up-and-coming artists in the current global art scene.

📍 12 Pedder Street, Central

18 H Queen's

This 24-storey vertical art space is currently home to world-class galleries and auction houses including David Zwirner, Hauser & Wirth, and Tang Contemporary Art. But what sets H Queen's apart from other art spaces in the city is its massive venues. Expect an elevated artviewing experience at these multi-floor galleries and plenty of large-scale installations that wouldn't fit in other locations.

STREET ART

The streets and walls of Old Town Central often double as canvases for gorgeous works of graffiti. Keep an eye out for these murals as you stroll around the neighbourhood.

19 21A Lyndhurst Terrace

It's hard to miss the massive portrait of a man surrounded by rising bubbles on the slopes of Cochrane Street. Set against the black mosaic tiles of the building, Hong Kong-based French muralist Elsa Jean de Dieu has injected her signature joy and lightness to the bustling streets of Soho. The mural is also one of many born out of the HK Walls 2018 project.

20 45-53 Graham Street

This hidden mural painting is done by local graffiti artist Peck who has decorated several walls in the city. Viewers have to peek in between two units to be rewarded with a wall full of colourful 3D lettering that spell out the artist's name, tucked away in this narrow alley.

21 46 Graham Street / 48 Hollywood Road

Without a doubt the most photographed example of street art in Hong Kong, local graffiti artist Alex Croft's colourful mural of old townhouses shines a light on the city's iconic tong lau tenement buildings. Boasting a vibrant blue background, this piece of street art is a vibrant and colourful window into the past.

22 Shingo Art

Japanese celebrity Shingo Katori has recently joined the fray of the Hong Kong street art scene to present a vibrant, red painting underneath one section of the Central - Mid-Levels escalator. The choice of colour, the Bauhinia motifs and the miniature skyline are all in tribute to Hong Kong. Take a step back and you'll find that together, these elements form an image of a dragon.

📍 Intersection of Hollywood Road and Shelley Street

23 Madera Hollywood Hotel

Nothing screams star power like the iconic figures of Marilyn Monroe, Audrey Hepburn and Charlie Chaplin. Covering the facade of this Hollywood Road hotel, the screen legends, accompanied by Frank Sinatra, are painted in pop art-like style in front of imagery of the Hong Kong skyline. Here's your chance to get a selfie with these Hollywood greats.

📍 53 Hollywood Road, Central

24 Tank Lane

Paying tribute to the one and only Bruce Lee, South Korean graffiti artist Xeva used his signature mosaic technique to create this large mural, which captures the likeness of the martial arts superstar. Strike a jeet kune do pose next to the graffiti at this staircase for the perfect Hong Kong snapshot.

ARTLANE

Tasting Hong Kong

A true food paradise, Old Town Central is a melting pot of flavours with something to sate all tastes. If you're looking for an authentic taste of Hong Kong, there's plenty here that fits the bill, from traditional dim sum to baked treats sold at shops that have stood the test of time. Of course, the culinary landscape here is also influenced by Hong Kong's status as a multicultural, trend-setting metropolis, and you'll find plenty of Michelin-starred restaurants here, as well as cutting-edge fusion cuisine and cocktail bars that rank among the best in the world.

TRADITIONAL CHINESE FLAVOURS

These time-honoured eateries are loved for their authentic Chinese fare, be it Cantonese dim sum or traditional baked treats.

25 Luk Yu Tea House

Established in 1933, this three-storey restaurant boasts plenty of old-world charm, especially with its historical design juxtaposed with traditional Chinese furnishings. It's also one of the best spots in town for an authentic dim sum meal, served with a wide variety of expertly brewed teas. The restaurant also offers larger dishes for dinner, such as the signature sweet and sour pork and roasted crispy chicken.

24-26 Stanley Street, Central

26 Lan Fong Yuen

If you want a cup of Hong Kong-style milk tea, head to Lan Fong Yuen. The popular beverage was influenced by British culture but is made with evaporated milk and sugar. Be sure to try the famous "silk stocking milk tea" which is passed through a fine mesh to give it a particularly smooth texture. While Lan Fong Yuen's original street stall still stands on Gage Street, head to the restaurant tucked behind for dishes such as the chicken noodles with scallion oil.

27 Sing Heung Yuen

Housed in a wide alleyway, this dai pai dong (open-air food stall) may not look particularly fancy but it's perpetually packed with customers who come from all corners of the city for the signature tomato noodle soup and crispy buns with lemon and honey. Cheap, cheerful and immensely comforting, the food here is so popular that even local celebrities have been spotted eating here. Drop by for an afternoon bite after browsing nearby attractions such as Pak Tsz Lane Park and PMQ.

29 Kung Lee Herbal Tea Shop

Founded in the 1940s, Kung Lee is still loved and frequented by many locals. The store retains much of its old-school features, including its wooden fixtures, ceramic tiles and ceiling fans. On the menu, the sugarcane juice is the bestseller. Peeled and steamed using traditional methods, the sugarcane is pressed with an antique juicer to produce a refreshingly sweet beverage that supposedly boasts a host of health benefits. Also don't miss the sugarcane pudding and various herbal teas.
